

I am disappointed to hear that the 'Do Not Call List' legislation is being challenged. I have very much enjoyed being able to only have personal calls on my phone. If it were not for this law, I would have disconnected my phone long ago and stayed with only a cell phone.

I consider telephone solicitors as trespassers who, if allowed, would enter our homes day and night wanting to sell their wares. Many communities have no soliciting ordenances which go unchallenged. Just because they are using the telephone, for whose service I pay, should not be a reason to differ. In fact, I would petition you to increase the penalties and prosecution of any company violating my right to use my property as I wish.

Thank you.
